October remains the National Breast Cancer Awareness Month

All women are at risk for Breast Cancer. It can also affect men, but this is rare. It is the most common cancer of all women. Many women have no symptoms, that's why, Early detection is so important. Self breast exams & mammograms are the best tests for early detection. One should check for new breast lumps that has changed in size, shape & painful. The risk can be lowered by staying active, maintaining a healthy weight, limiting the amount of alcohol intake, & knowing your family history. Breast Cancer is the most common diagnosis in Black women, but they are less likely to get breast cancer. YET they have a higher breast cancer death rate; mostly due to late detection in the late stages.. Many women have no symptoms, that's why early detection is so important. When detected early, treatment is most effective, & many go on to live long & healthy lives.
